

February 25, 2010

Dear Mr. Jennerik,

Very recently, our teacher finished reading us your book, "Just Right!". I thought that the book reached out as a message to conserve energy and preserve our planet. It had humor and a rich, strong meaning. I very much liked the twist of zervs. I realized that in this book zervs represent machines, zervberries represent electricity, and purple rocks represent coal.

I have to say my favorite part was the beginning. It introduces a lot of ideas and really grabs the reader. My least favorite part was the ending. I thought it was very abrupt and cut off, leaving the reader very puzzled. I do like the style of your writing and how you presented it. I really liked how you changed names like "Walmart" to "Wantmart". I thought that was witty.

(Continued on back)

Overall, I thought it was a good book. I would recommend it to children my age (10), and children around that age. I think this book will inspire anyone who reads it to help the planet in any way they can. You have inspired me! Thank you for sharing this book with Shaw School. Keep writing!

I hope all readers enjoy it,
L,

(P.s. anything you write, I'll read!!!)

To: Bobby
Jennerik.

~ L

In the small town of Bauville,
B.A.U. is expected.
Then a trouble befalls them,
(They all think it's wretched).
Can they change their ways
In a matter of days?
And so begins a journey,
To be efficient, neat, and clean
And of generations far before them,
Extra luxuries were of not of need!

The book that you have written
Draws into a story that yields,
Into a wonderful lesson
And spreads through your entire,
Imagination field!